Veganuary

As memories of champagne, mince pies and one-too-many Quality Street linger, adopting 'Veganuary' could help us feel back on track! Whatever your motivation; ethics, the environment, or a New Year health-kick, Veganism is much more accessible, with over 1/8th of the British population vegetarian or vegan. So, remove all the temptation (yes, that includes the leftover cheese!), ban your weekend bacon sarnies and commit to Veganism. As inspiration, here's our round-up of Chelsea's best locations with tempting vegan dishes guaranteed to make sure you don't go hungry...

Wulf & Lamb

243 Pavilion Road, London
www.wulfandlamb.com

'For ferocious herbivores and friends' is their tag line and it couldn't be any closer to the truth. January may be cold and bleak, but Wulf and Lamb offer comfort food turned up a notch; indulgent, warming and 100% vegan. Satisfy those cravings with truffle pasta; sedanini pasta with mixed mushrooms and white truffle oil or if you're in for breakfast, go for the Full Wulf; potato layer cake, barlotti ragout scrambled ackee, lemon spinach, sautéed peppers, mushrooms and toasted sourdough.

KXU

241 Pavilion Road, London
www.kxu.co.uk

Make the fitness and wellbeing hub, KXU, on Pavilion Road your second-home this Jan. Sweat out those Christmas toxins with a workout class (we hear The Games is a real challenge) and then refuel at their Nutrition Bar designed to nourish, aid recovery and enhance performance. The Vegan Bowl will fill you up 'till your next meal (raw Mediterranean salad, fregola, broccoli and cauliflower, pumpkin seeds and preserved lemon) whilst if you're after something lighter, most of their smoothies can be made vegan. Our favourite is the Superhero, banana, rice milk, peanut butter, GF rolled oats, chocolate plant protein, flax seed and cacao powder.

Vardo

9 Duke of York Square, London
www.vardorestaurant.co.uk

Low and slow cooking inspired by dishes from across the world makes Vardo a perfect destination for vegan globetrotters. Designed for sharing, thier vegan dishes are packed with colour and flavour making for a delicious January feast. Enjoy roasted Jerusalem artichokes, green tahini with pomegranate and mint or charred sweetcorn, salted pandau, coconut milk, sesame and chilli. For something a little larger, try the quinoa grain bowl, with quinoa, edamame and buckwheat, broccoli, pickled daikon, toasted sweatpeas, mung beans and sesame soy.

The Phene

9 Phene Street, London
www.thephe.com

Chelsea institution, The Phene, is not the traditional watering-hole. With a kitchen run by Michelin-trained chef, Sid Kounta, The Phene has menus to cater for every nutritional need. We suggest you indulge in the moving mountains vegan burger with vegan gouda and finish with the vegan apple tarte tatin and coconut yogurt, sure to cause food envy amongst your friends. If you've taken things one step further and opted in to "Dry Jan" as well, they stock three alcohol-free beers as well as 0% alcoholic cocktails.

Rabbit

172 King's Road, London
www.rabbit-restaurant.com

Championing local and wild British produce are the Gladwin brothers, founders of King's Road haunt, Rabbit, which comes with a separate vegan menu. Share and enjoy their selection of mouthfuls; breakfast radish and pickle gel or caraway crisp bread, tamarind ketchup and pickled rapeseed, followed by broad bean hummus or courgette tartare.
